Gov't Control For High Schools Urged

Secondary school education should be given over a period of five years and should begin after seven years of elementary schooling, instead of the present system of eight years of elementary and four of secondary schooling, said Prof. H. Lindemann, of the Physics Division of the Technion, in Haifa last week.

This would enable gifted pupils to make better use of their time. It would also be advisable for all secondary schools in the country to come under government control, he added.

Prof. Lindemann was addressing an audience of science teachers from all over the country at the closing session of the fall meeting of the Israel Physical Society, at which he had an invited paper on "The Control of Instruction in Physics in Secondary Schools and Institutes of Higher Learning".

He pointed out the difficulties in the undergraduate teaching of physics were encountered in institutes of higher learning because of the lack of sufficient basic instruction in physics in our secondary schools. A revised physics syllabus had now been drawn up which would lead to an improvement.

The Technion took a first step during the past summer by enabling physics teachers to attend a summer school and laboratory work at the Technion, and it was hoped to offer increased facilities of this kind in the future.

A second invited paper, on "The present state of our knowledge of the structure of the nucleus" was also read yesterday afternoon by Prof. A. De Shalit of the Weizmann Institute. The session was presided over by Prof. N. Rosen, Dean of the Technion Faculty of Science.

The project has two-story houses in an area said to be restricted to one-story houses.

His work will remain as a lasting tribute to the great pioneering spirit of early Zionism.

At the Cinema

STUDENTS of film history should not miss the revival of "Rise of the Roman Empire" at the "Studio" (Jerusalem). All the elements of the Italian Neo-realism can be found in this forerunner of it. Seldom has a film been initiated over and over again like this one, even down to the dunking of actresses which, since then, has become one of the chief ingredients of Italian cinema.

Now that the Sinai Campaign has come back in the version of foreign newsreels, comparison with them shows how unprepared the self-praise which our own cameramen have been bestowing on themselves. It would be a good idea to include in our public media that are to be reorganized.

The present film, realistic and strongly humorous above all, adds to the Guinness gallery of characters, all different, whether in "Kind Hearts and Coronets", "Captain's Paradise", "The Swan" or "To Paris with Love" — each one separate in type and in make-up, only connected by a deplorable degree of similarity. Looking back on them, you recognize them.
